

DIGITAL

The Digital sector involves working with computers and information systems, including computer applications, software and hardware. There are jobs in design, development, manufacture, customer service, sales and installation.

Every brand you can think of, along with public sector organisations, football teams and charities recruits for staff in the digital sector. If a company has any kind of website, mobile app or digital presence, they'll need some kind of digital workforce to power it.

The digital economy is a major source of employment. The research suggests that some 1.46m people work in digital companies, with around 45,000 jobs being advertised at any one time.
